

ALTEREA PRESENTS

STARDUST PROGRAM

DIRECTOR'S NOTE

This is a difficult show to put into words, but for the next two hours, you're going to see us try. Of all the shows I've worked on, it's very safe to say there's never been one remotely like this.

Stardust is experimental and familiar. Uplifting and heartbreaking. Grounded and abstract. Every artist who has worked on this show has put a bit of their own dreams, their own yearnings, and their own sacrifices into it. It's vast and much more than the sum of its parts. I cannot do it justice in this simple director's note.

What I can say though, is that at its heart, Stardust is about longing. It's about uncertainty. It's about what we do with the time that is given to us. To yearn for what we don't have is undeniably human. Do we chase after our dreams? Or find contentment in what we already have? Is our happiness somewhere out there, waiting to be found? Or is it already here, just waiting for us to realize it?

Stardust isn't about giving you these answers. But it is about asking these questions.
So come on into the Hotel Dion. Sit back, have a drink, and wonder a little with us.
